

About the RASC

The Royal Agricultural Society of the Commonwealth (RASC) was founded in 1957 and is a confederation of more than 50 Agricultural Societies, from 21 Commonwealth Countries.

It is the only non-governmental organisation representing Agriculture across the Commonwealth, and works closely with the Commonwealth Secretariat and other similar organisations, to promote and share knowledge to help develop and enhance rural communities.

It has a strong network of members, organisations and supporters who demonstrate best practices in agriculture, as well as bringing new ideas and research to the fore.

Biannually RASC hosts a conference, tours and seminars, attended by member societies bringing the commonwealth together to network, socialise and look to the future.

"Being an RASC Member opens doors beyond your own country and situations. It connects you to a global network of like-minded leaders and organisations."

"Organisations, such as the RASC, provide a very valuable resource to enable our member organisations to meet, whether in person or virtually, to swap ideas and offer support across a range of diverse countries."

"Looking to the future, the RASC's Next Generation programme offers an unparalleled experience and opportunity for the young people, who'll be leading and shaping agriculture in the future."

The Royal Agricultural Society of the Commonwealth

Membership Benefits:

- Be part of a global network; united across the Commonwealth
- Access to regular newsletters; promoting show dates, member activities and industry information
- Involvement in RASC podcasts, webinars and seminars
- Advertise your events on our website, social media channels and within our newsletters
- Secure a place at, and send representatives to, the RASC Conference held every two years
- Engage with the Next Generation of RASC, including the bi-annual Understanding Missions

57.6%
Newsletter
Open Rate

Increasing
Media
Presence

50
Members in 21 Countries

RASC Conference

The RASC organises the bi-annual Commonwealth Agricultural Conference, which is hosted by member societies around the world, attracting delegates from all parts of the Commonwealth. Leading experts in agriculture contribute to the Conference as well as CEOs from the member societies.

All member societies are encouraged to send Next Generation delegates to the Conference. They, and the CEOs, both hold a one-day seminar as part of the programme.

There is always a well attended pre-conference tour which members, friends and associates can attend before the RASC Conference commences.

The 2018 Conference was held in Canada, hosted by Northlands, Edmonton.

The 2024 Conference will be held in Edinburgh, Scotland, with the kind support of the Royal Highland and Agricultural Society of Scotland.

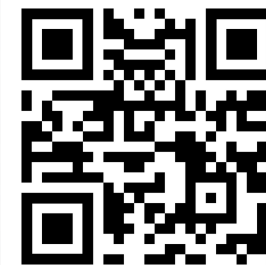

Join the RASC

The RASC is dedicated to promoting open communication between the Agricultural Societies of the Commonwealth.

Joining us will give you the opportunity to share your ideas across a global spectrum, with advice and information offered throughout your membership.

To become a member, please fill out the relevant application forms on our website under the 'Join Us' section.

Scan the QR code below to visit our website:

Stay connected:

